MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

Fullam, Sr. J.

November 21, 2006

In both of the captioned actions, Allstate Insurance Company seeks a declaratory judgment to the effect that it has no obligation to defend or indemnify the defendants, who are being sued in state court by the parents of a murder victim who was slain by the defendants' children. Plaintiff has filed motions for summary judgment in both cases. These motions will be granted.

The facts are not in dispute. The homeowners insurance policies issued by plaintiff to each set of defendants contained language excluding from coverage "any bodily injury or property damage intended by, or which may reasonably be expected to result from, the intentional or criminal acts or omissions of any insured person." It is undisputed that the teenagers responsible for the murder in question were "insured persons" under the policies, since the term "insured" is defined as including any relative or dependent person who is a resident of the household. Thus, plaintiff is not required to provide defense or indemnity. Defendants' reliance upon the decision in Donegal Mutual Ins. Co. v. Baumhammers, 32 Pa. Super. 893 (2006), petition for allowance of appeal granted, 2006 Pa. LEXIS 1649 (Pa. August 29, 2006), is misplaced. The insurance policy involved in that case excluded only injury "expected or intended by the insured," and the alleged wrongdoer did not fit within that definition.
